

PhD Thesis Project Offer

(valid since March 2026)

Provisional Title of the Doctoral Thesis

Neurolaw and Human Rights: Legal Safeguards in the Face of Advances in Neuroscience and Neurotechnology.

Subject area* / Research line

Social and Legal Sciences.

Summary of the Doctoral Thesis (maximum 300 words)

Neurolaw analyses the ethical and regulatory challenges arising from the development of technologies capable of interacting with brain activity. Issues such as mental privacy, the possible alteration of cognitive processes, and the attribution of criminal responsibility are becoming increasingly relevant. Its fundamental purpose is to establish protective frameworks that safeguard human autonomy, identity and dignity against the risks of neurosurveillance and neural intervention.
